PART 3

Participants in the Calmbirth® training must

- Believe primarily in the natural process of childbirth
- Challenge the existing culture that promotes birth as a fearful, stressful experience
- Believe when necessary, intervention during labour and childbirth may be needed

The Calmbirth® philosophy is based on the belief that birth is a natural process to be experienced by the birthing couple and their baby in a calm and joyful manner. The Calmbirth® classes seek to allay the fear and anxiety of pregnant couples in the pre natal period. The classes educate the pregnant couple in the understanding of the birth process. Calmbirth® subscribes to the belief that mothers have within themselves resources which they can use to facilitate the birth of their baby without fear and in a state of calm no matter how the labour and birth presents itself. The aim of the Calmbirth® program is to empower couples to take back the locus of control for their own birthing experience. In Calmbirth® the role of the father or birthing companion is vitally important.

The Calmbirth® organisation has a strict code of practice and it is vitally important that, for the sake of couples attending the Calmbirth® classes and the reputation of Calmbirth® that the program remains reputable. For this reason it is a requirement of all participants in the Calmbirth® training and registered Calmbirth® Educators that all agreements are signed and honoured.
